Statement of reasons

This notice comes into force on 16 July 2015 and is revoked on 15 July 2020.

This notice exempts the Panel from sections 276 to 279 of the Act to the extent that the Panel has a relevant interest in quoted voting products of a listed issuer, which relevant interest arises as the result of an enforceable undertaking and results in the Panel having a substantial holding in the listed issuer.

The Financial Markets Authority (the FMA), after satisfying itself as to the matters set out in section 557 of the Act, considers it appropriate to grant the exemption because—

- the exemption addresses an unintended consequence whereby the Panel may have a substantial holding in a listed issuer by virtue of having the ability to enforce enforceable undertakings for the purposes of enforcing compliance with the Code, or in relation to schemes of arrangement under the Companies Act 1993, thereby giving the Panel a relevant interest in quoted voting products of the listed issuer that comprise 5% or more of that class of quoted voting products. The relevant interest would only arise as a result of the Panel performing its regulatory role in Code regulated transactions. It would not be related to normal trading in the market or any other activity the deterrence of which is the purpose of the substantial holding disclosure provisions as set out in section 273 of the Act:
- the exemption is necessary to prevent any confusion in the market as to the Panel's ownership or control of quoted voting products of a listed issuer. Disclosure of the Panel's relevant interest would not provide the market with any useful information for the purpose of making decisions relating to financial products. Any enforceable undertakings would normally be disclosed in the relevant transaction documents (i.e., in any notices of meeting or offer documents, as the case may be) and/or public announcements by the Panel, and in the event of an enforceable undertaking being enforced by the Panel, the market would also be informed:

- the exemption will promote the confident and informed participation of businesses, investors and consumers in the financial markets by reducing the potential for uncertainty and confusion as to the nature of the Panel's interest in respect of any substantial holdings in listed issuers. The exemption will also promote flexibility in the substantial holdings disclosure regime for an issue that appears to arise as an unintended consequence:
- the exemption avoids unnecessary compliance costs, because without an exemption the Panel would be required to make disclosures under sections 276 to 279 of the Act every time an enforceable undertaking in respect of the quoted voting products of a Code company results in the Panel having a substantial holding:
- the granting of the exemption is desirable in order to promote the purposes of the Act, specifically to promote the confident and informed participation of businesses, investors and consumers in the financial markets, and to avoid unnecessary compliance costs:
- the exemption is not broader than is reasonably necessary to address the matters that gave rise to it, as it applies only in limited and specific circumstances that may arise in the course of the Panel performing its regulatory role in Code regulated transactions.
